

Embodiment & Desire

with David Bloom and Christian Meier
08.04. to 10.04.22 TanzZentrale Fürth

In the somatic world, there is often a blind spot when it comes to exploring the reproductive (or "sex") organs, while in conscious sexuality practice there is often lacking the anatomical and embryological knowledge to deeply dive into an embodied movement exploration of this area of the body, that carries so much history, fear and potential for pleasure.

Is there in fact anything "sexual" about exploring the reproductive organs somatically? Or is it the least sexual system of all to explore? What comes up for us when we move and are moved by this system?

David Bloom is a dancer and choreographer who has been working on questions of desire, boundaries and conscious sexuality for the past decade.

Christian Meier is a medical doctor who has been exploring and teaching Body-Mind-Centering for many years.

This open-ended laboratory is a meeting of their two practices and common questions.

(All proposals will be fully clothed. Personal boundaries and comfort of all participants will be centered at all times.)
